Whereas, A New York Times editorial recently highlighted the need for an end to the barbaric and medically hazardous practice of shackling female patients in labor\(^1\); and

Whereas, In 2007, ACOG sent a letter to the Rebecca Project for Human Rights advocating for federal legislation to prohibit the practice of shackling incarcerated pregnant women in labor\(^2\); and

Whereas, The 8th Circuit US Court of Appeals recently ruled favorably in the case of Shannon Nelson (a shackled nonviolent inmate who sustained injuries in labor) vs. Correctional Medical Services; and

Whereas, Thirty-four organizations submitted amicus briefs in support of Shannon Nelson’s advocacy to prevent future inmates from being shackled during labor; and

Whereas, The aforementioned NY Times editorial noted the Federal Bureau of Prisons position to end the “routine use of restraints for women in labor and limited shackling to cases in which a woman presents a danger to herself, the baby or the staff”; and

Whereas, AMA Policy H-430.997 states the detention facilities should “provide medical care that meets prevailing community standards”; and

Whereas, The American Civil Liberties Union has developed a draft medical bill and six states (CA, IL, NM, NY, TX and VT) have enacted laws discouraging this practice; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That our American Medical Association support language recently adopted by the New Mexico legislature that at “an adult or juvenile correctional facility, detention center or local jail shall use the least restrictive restraints necessary when the facility has actual or constructive knowledge that an inmate is in the 2nd or 3rd trimester of pregnancy. No restraints of any kind shall be used on an inmate who is in labor, delivering her baby or recuperating from the delivery unless there are compelling grounds to believe that the inmate presents:

• An immediate and serious threat of harm to herself, staff or others; or
• A substantial flight risk and cannot be reasonably contained by other means.

If an inmate who is in labor or who is delivering her baby is restrained, only the least restrictive restraints necessary to ensure safety and security shall be used.” (New HOD Policy); and be it further

RESOLVED, That our AMA develop model state legislation prohibiting the use of shackles on pregnant women unless flight or safety concerns exist. (Directive to Take Action)

Fiscal Note: Staff cost estimated at less than $500 to implement.
