Washington State Institute for Public Policy

Mission

The Washington Legislature created the Washington State Institute for Public Policy in 1983. A Board of Directors—representing the legislature, the governor, and public universities—governs the Institute, hires the director, and guides the development of all activities.

The Institute's mission is to carry out practical research, at legislative direction, on issues of importance to Washington State. The Institute conducts research activities using its own policy analysts, academic specialists from universities, and consultants. New activities grow out of requests from the Washington legislature and executive branch agencies, often directed through legislation. Institute staff work closely with legislators, as well as legislative, executive, and state agency staff to define and conduct research on appropriate state public policy topics.

Current assignments include a wide range of projects in criminal justice, youth violence, social services, K-12 education, and state government organization.

WASHINGTON STATE SEXUALLY VIOLENT PREDATORS: Profile of Special Commitment Center Residents

The Community Protection Research Project was established by the 1990 Legislature to evaluate the effectiveness of state-supported programs for sex offenders and victims of sexual abuse. The Washington State Institute for Public Policy oversees the project. This report is part of the Institute's plan to provide ongoing information to the Legislature, as well as local agencies.

Introduction

In 1990, Washington State enacted a civil commitment law for persons found to be sexually violent predators.¹ As of September 1996, 38 persons are housed at the Center; 21 have been committed under the Act and the others are awaiting trial. They are housed at the Special Commitment Center, a Department of Social and Health Services facility that is located within the state prison in Monroe, Washington.

This paper summarizes records from the Special Commitment Center regarding the resident's criminal history, offense pattern, treatment history, and mental health diagnosis.²
